

Publish with us

LSE Press provides a flexible and supportive approach to reviewing and developing your book. We provide a unique developmental peer review and editing process where our team will work closely with you.

We are committed to funding and publishing high-quality publications from a diverse range of authors, both established academics and Early Career Researchers across all LSE's research specialisms.

We believe research and teaching resources should be free to read and can also promote greater equity in academic research.

Get in touch with your book idea and meet us for an online informal chat at LSE.Publishing@lse.ac.uk.

About LSE Press

LSE Press is a new and rapidly growing publisher of high-quality, open access research in the social sciences.

We are led by our Editor-in-Chief, Professor Patrick Dunleavy, and supported by our Editorial Board, which provides academic expertise from across the social sciences. It reviews and provides guidance for our programme of publications.

Recent titles:

