

Halliday Bibliography

A list of the academic works of Professor Fred Halliday from 1965 to 2011

Archives Division

Department of International Relations

London School of Economics and Political Science

Introduction

This bibliographic project was instigated in 2011 to catalogue the works of the late Professor Fred Halliday with a view to compiling a complete list of all academic works produced during his life. It runs parallel to a second project – the Halliday Archive – the aim of which is to list and store Professor Halliday’s correspondence, personal effects and non-academic material. The aim of this document is to serve as a useful guide to the two projects for those who wish to locate any materials relating to Professor Halliday’s life and works.

What is in the Archive?

Professor Halliday’s Archive is located within the Archives Division of the LSE Library. It is a physical repository containing over 200 files of personal effects, correspondence, memoirs, unpublished texts and work documents which may be accessed in accordance with the rules and regulations of the LSE Archives (see <http://www2.lse.ac.uk/library/archive/Home.aspx> for more information). Particular files can be searched online using the Archives Catalogue (<http://www.archives.lse.ac.uk>) but must be requested and viewed in person in the Archives Reading Room on the Lower Ground Floor of the LSE Library.

What is in the Bibliography?

The Bibliography has been funded by the LSE Department of International Relations in order to provide as complete a list as possible of English-language academic works by Professor Halliday. The Bibliography is a list rather than a repository. As such, there is no physical storage space attached to the project, and items in the list must be sought in both physical and online repositories. How to locate these materials is discussed below. The Bibliography is concerned with Halliday’s works whether published or unpublished. It therefore contains many works which were either (i) never published, (ii) published in a substantially-altered form, or (iii) published under a different name. The only case where unpublished material is not listed is when it has clearly been subsequently published in much the same format and with the same title. As a result, all draft material is located within the Archive, but only those draft materials mentioned above are also listed within the Bibliography.

Although the Bibliography includes well over one thousand works there are three important limitations on the material included which should be noted.

- 1) The scope of the Bibliography has been limited to English-language materials. As Professor Halliday wrote many texts in German, Spanish and many other languages – and as his books have been widely translated – those seeking his foreign language publications will need to consult the Archive.

- 2) The Bibliography contains only academic works. Memoirs, media transcripts & videos, correspondence and other works of a more personal nature are not included. These can instead be located within the Archive.
- 3) All of the works contained within the Bibliography have been authored by Halliday, either alone or in conjunction with other scholars. Works about Halliday – for example, reviews of his books, articles on his work, and interview transcripts – are primarily located within the Archive.

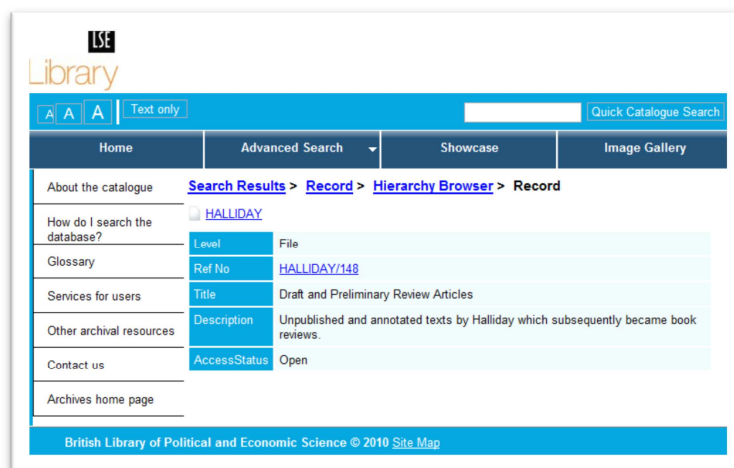

A final point worth noting is that it has been decided to stress breadth over depth in the construction of the Bibliography. As a result around a quarter of items in the list contain relatively little contextual information (e.g. dates, publication location etc.). This means that the Bibliography extends beyond the already well-known books and journal articles, but it does mean that for some items it will be difficult to establish information on the text itself. It is hoped, however, that this problem will be mitigated in three respects: (i) Firstly, those documents with little or no contextual information are stored within the Archive, meaning that the lack of information will not prevent readers from locating the text. (ii) Secondly, these texts have a reference number in the Archives (e.g. HALLIDAY/211) which can be used to reference the texts in academic works in the absence of complete information. (iii) Thirdly, it is envisaged that many academics and colleagues of Professor Halliday will know more about some of the texts than those compiling the list, and as such any additional information received can be incorporated into the Bibliography at a future date. (Information on mistakes or omissions should be emailed to: b.m.martill@lse.ac.uk).

How to use the Bibliography

The Bibliography presented here is a hard-copy version of an online list located at <http://eprints.lse.ac.uk>. The list has been compiled utilising the LSE Research Online cataloguing software and all of Professor Halliday's works have also now been deposited on their website. In order to see only the works of Professor Halliday online, one should select 'Browse by LSE Author' on the ePrints website to see the 'Halliday, Fred' option. The online version of the Bibliography contains a greater level of information on each text than the hard-copy version and provides additional guidance on locating copies of the referenced materials.

To locate a specific work it is necessary to click on its title in the online version of the Bibliography. This will link to a page providing a greater level of detail than the simple reference, including abstracts, copyright information and details of the type of work. This page will also provide one of three different cues for locating the material itself:

- 1) Published Item. Where the site displays this link the entire text is available to view online. Clicking on the link will bring up an online version of the text. In some cases an LSE or Athens account login may be required. The majority of recent journal articles by Professor Halliday are available online in this manner.
- 2) LSE Archives Catalogue. Where this link is displayed the item is available in the LSE Archive, located on the Lower Ground Floor of the LSE Library. The link leads to the specific file in the Archives Catalogue (<http://archives.lse.ac.uk>, see image below) which can then be requested. Items can be requested by any member of the LSE Library in accordance with the rules of the Archive but must not be removed from the Archives Reading Room. The majority of draft and unpublished works are located in the Archive, along with rarer examples of published work.

- 3) Full text not available from this repository. Where no link is given this is usually because the text is not available online but can be easily located elsewhere. This is the usual option for books, and for magazine and journal articles published before the late 1990s. If the material is located in the LSE Library it can be located using the Library Catalogue (see <http://catalogue.lse.ac.uk>). Where the LSE Library does not hold the required item it is possible to search all libraries in the UK using COPAC (see <http://www.copac.ac.uk>) to locate a copy. The libraries in London which are most likely to hold the material contained here are: Senate House Library, University of London; the Library of the School of Oriental and African Studies, and the British Library

Acknowledgements

The author of the Bibliography would like to take the time to thank those individuals whose help and support have ensured that the project could reach completion. Professor Halliday's former research students Dr George Lawson (LSE) and Dr David Styan (Birkbeck) each gave many hours of their time to ensure that the project was running smoothly and provided much personal encouragement and useful information. Sue Donnelly and Anna Towlson (LSE Archives) both helped to ensure that the project would fit around day-to-day working activities and generously offered the use of office space in the Archives to undertake work and store material. Finally, Natalia Madjarevic (LSE Library) helpfully provided all the training and support necessary for working with the LSE Research Online software. To all of these individuals I owe a great deal of thanks!
