The screenshot shows a Twitter thread with three tweets. The first tweet is from Conor Gearty (@conorgearty) on April 30, recommending a new book from @CUP_Law on strategic treaty management by Thomas McInerney @LoyolaProlaw. The second tweet is from Daniel (@officialpubs) on April 30, replying to @conorgearty and stating they have ordered a copy for @LSELibrary and asking if it can be reserved. The third tweet is from Conor Gearty (@conorgearty) on June 4, replying to @officialpubs and saying 'great thanks. Conor'. The screenshot also shows interaction icons like replies, retweets, and likes, as well as options to 'View details' and 'Hide conversation'.

Topic: How Transitional Justice Mechanisms and Processes Interact in Practical Settings: A Holistic Approach to Justice in Cote d'Ivoire

I have essentially broken my initial research into the following parts:

- 1) the ongoing transitional justice process in Cote d'Ivoire (Ivory Coast)
- 2) justification for a move towards holistic justice
- 3) holistic approaches to transitional justice (including: international trials, local trials, truth commissions, traditional justice)
- 4) the transitional justice processes in: Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Timor Leste (East Timor)
