

What can we learn about getting people involved in politics from the Scottish referendum? (Video)

I have been on Sky News talking about what we can learn from the Scottish referendum about getting people interested in politics.

You can watch the video by clicking on the photo below.

I was in debate with James Bloodworth from LeftFootForward blog.

Top lines from me?

Social media is a great tool but you need to give people a clear decision on a big issue that matters to them.

Politicians are too professional, but don't wait for them to change – get organised yourself.

- Copyright © 2014 London School of Economics and Political Science