The network expanded into Latin America, where experts from Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Ecuador and Uruguay initiated collaboration to conduct similar surveys and research in their countries. Kids Online América Latina was established in June 2015 in order to exchange experiences and produce better ways to measure internet use among children in Latin America.

The upcoming studies will be compared both within the region, as well as with those from Europe, paying attention to diversity and difference related to sociocultural environments, age, gender, internet use, skills, and risks that children encounter online. Global Kids Online Latin America aims to produce research that will help children and their parents use the internet in a safe and responsible way, enjoying all the potential benefits that the online environment affords.
