

Read our new ebook by the LSE's Frank Vibert

 blogs.lse.ac.uk/brexit/2016/01/16/read-our-new-ebook-by-the-lses-frank-vibert/

16/01/2016

On the edge

David Cameron's
EU renegotiation strategies

Frank Vibert

LSE BrexitVote's first ebook has just been published.

After promising the British public a referendum on whether to stay in the EU, David Cameron is currently trying to renegotiate the terms of the UK's membership. His increasingly Eurosceptical party and a press that is often hostile towards the European Union makes the task a particularly challenging one.

In this series of five essays, Frank Vibert, a Senior Visiting Fellow in the Department of Government at the London School of Economics and Political Science, draws on his experience as a founder director of the European Policy Forum to analyse the five strands of Cameron's renegotiation strategy. He concludes that – if he succeeds – the Prime Minister's approach may lead member states and Brussels institutions to move away from their current strategy of stressing EU citizens' rights, rather than their consent.

Click to download the ebook.

OnTheEdgeFrankVibert

- Copyright © 2015 London School of Economics