

Blogues: do they mean us?

---

 blogs.lse.ac.uk/polis/2008/03/20/blogues-do-they-mean-us/

2008-3-20

I spent yesterday being interviewed by journalists from around the world (and Sky) about the Express/McCann story. The bonus for me is a chance to hear direct from international journalists what they really think about the UK media and British current affairs in general. One great way that we can all do this is, of course, through their blogs. There is a particularly good 'blogue' written by Mali Ilse Paquin, the London correspondent for a group of French Canadian newspapers.

Even if your French isn't too hot you get a gist from the Franglais headlines about what They think is interesting about Us:

Super Tony à la rescousse de la planète

Le verre d'eau d'Heather Mills

Le blues des banquiers de la City

Le patriotisme? No thank you, we're British

- Copyright © 2014 London School of Economics and Political Science