

"howling blood-thirsty British tabloid journalists"

---

 blogs.lse.ac.uk/polis/2007/05/14/howling-blood-thirsty-british-tabloid-journalists/

2007-5-14

The British media has become so frantic in their coverage of the Madeleine McCann story that they have spawned a Portuguese website devoted to correcting their excesses. Paulo Reis is furious at the allegations that the Portuguese police have been lazy or incompetent. He describes the UK media in the Algarve and Sky's Martin Brunt in particular as

"howling blood-thirsty British tabloid journalists, willing to kill – or let someone be killed – to have a story. That's ok with me, as you keep this low form of life inside your country and don't export it to Portugal."

More from Paulo anon, I hope.

- Copyright © 2014 London School of Economics and Political Science